Our supply chains and supplier adherence to our value

The relationship with a majority of our suppliers has been established over several years. When we acquire goods or services from new contractors or suppliers, we pre-qualify them through our due diligence process. Amongst other things, we look at a supplier's company performance and get references from other customers to establish that they are suitable.

To date, we have not discovered or been made aware of any human trafficking or slavery activities within our supply chain. However, if any were to be highlighted to us, we would act immediately in accordance with our legal and moral obligations.

Due diligence process

We have systems in place to ensure:

- individuals have the right to work in the country of employment;
- as a minimum, a living wage is paid;
- that working hour restrictions are complied with;
- that bullying, discrimination and harassment is not permitted or tolerated in any form;
- working environment conditions are safe;
- we identify and assess potential risk areas when considering new suppliers;
- we regularly review our existing supply chains;
- we mitigate the risk of slavery and human trafficking occurring in our supply chains;
- we monitor potential risk areas in our supply chains; and
- we protect whistleblowers.

With regards to our supply chain, we will issue supplier questionnaires to our key suppliers to enable us to undertake compliance checks in accordance with our internal requirements and legal requirements in relation to modern slavery.

Adherence to our values

To ensure all business activity and those in our supply chain comply with our values, we have in place a rigorous compliance programme. We have a dedicated compliance team, which consists of involvement from the following departments:

- Legal
- Information Security and Compliance
- Human Resources
